The Mexico City office of Hogan Lovells (formerly Barrera, Sequiros y Torres Landa) is one of Mexico’s leading law firms. The office is consistently ranked as one of the top firms in Latin America. Its lawyers provide advice on a wide variety of issues, from regulatory matters to foreign investment in Mexico. Many of the firm’s partners have LL.M. degrees from top American law schools. The firm is deeply involved in legal issues arising from the recent liberalization of Mexican laws in areas such as telecommunications and energy development.

For more information about the firm, its lawyers and the legal issues it addresses, please consult at the firm’s website: https://www.hoganlovells.com/en/locations/mexico-city.

Because of the firm’s location and its practice, a working knowledge of Spanish is required for this internship. Fluency is not essential. Not all the work is in Spanish, and indeed much of the firm’s international work takes place in English.

The firm will pay the intern an amount sufficient to cover air fare and living expenses.

Applications must include the following:

- A current CV, including the names of at least two references
- A cover letter explaining the applicant’s interest in the firm and highlighting relevant experience, course work and language skills
- A current law school transcript, either official or unofficial

Please address applications to Professor Gregory Fox (gfox@wayne.edu) and send them by email no later than Friday, February 10, 2017 at 5:00 pm. Late applications or applications missing any of the above materials will not be considered.
