Dear Wayne Law alumni,

Wayne State University Law School, Dean Frank H. Wu, the Law School Board of Visitors, and the Law School Alumni Association will host the 11th annual Treasure of Detroit Gala at 5:30 p.m. on Saturday, April 5, 2008, at Wayne State University Law School.

As the Honorary Class Chair for this event, an alumnus and former dean of Wayne State University Law School, I am thrilled to play a role in honoring some of the legal community’s finest. This year, we honor John Collins Jr, ’76, Judge Jessica Cooper, ’73, and Cornelius Pitts, ’64 – all of whom have certainly made their mark in law and are deeply respected and admired by their peers.

The 2008 Treasure of Detroit will feature a VIP reception, a silent auction to benefit student organizations, a strolling dinner and an awards program. It will feature Honorary Event Hosts: Class of 1968, as well as serve as a venue to wish current Dean Frank H. Wu well in future endeavors and welcome incoming Dean Designate Robert M. Ackerman.

This event is an important one for the Law School. Not only is it a wonderful opportunity to honor our peers, fellow alumni and friends, it is also a great opportunity to show support for Wayne State University Law School – our Law School.

To RSVP for this fine event, please click on www.specialevents.wayne.edu/treasure. For more information, please contact the Law School Development & Alumni Relations Office at (313) 577-3113 or at al6999@wayne.edu.

I hope to see you there!

Sincerely,

James K. Robinson, ’68

“Not only is [Treasure of Detroit] a wonderful opportunity to honor our peers, fellow alumni and friends, it is also a great opportunity to show support for Wayne State University Law School – our Law School.”

There’s still time to RSVP!
The WSU Alumni Association achieved another milestone in the implementation of its 2007-2010 Strategic Action Plan with the election Feb. 18, 2008, of a new Board of Directors to replace the existing board under a new governance structure. The new members are all leaders in their fields and active in many professional and non-profit organizations, representing education, human services, the arts, business and the professions. Some are already involved as alumni leaders in the university. For the first time, one director is from outside Michigan. At their first meeting this spring, the board will elect officers.

The 12 alumni elected to the board include:

Vernice Davis Anthony
(BS 1970)
President and CEO, Greater Detroit Area Health Council Inc.
Emerita member, WSU Board of Governors

Nancy Edmunds
(J.D. 1976)

“My involvement [in Moot Court and the Free Legal Aid Clinic] helped me to develop more confidence and experience outside of the scholastic environment of the classroom. Being able to apply legal concepts to real cases definitely helped me as I entered the legal field.”

- David O’Hara, ’05

Why did you choose Wayne Law?
I chose Wayne State University Law School because of my ties to Michigan and Detroit. In choosing to practice within the Metro Detroit area I knew that Wayne Law was reputable and respected by area firms and attorneys.

How did you find your first job?
I attained my first job during on-campus interviews and clerked between my second and third year before passing the Bar and working for the same firm for my first year of practice. Shortly after beginning working I realized that I desired to have my own practice which would give me the flexibility I needed in order to pursue other opportunities while still practicing law. I currently have my office out of Novi.

Was there one thing, one class, one professor at Wayne State University Law School that was particularly important to you?
My classes and interaction with Prof. Cooney were definitely most important to me. It always seemed that he stressed the personal interaction and relationship with the client. I have applied that to my own practice and I try to make each client feel as if they are my priority at any given time.

How did involvement in student organizations affect your law school experience?
I was involved in Moot Court and the Free Legal Aid Clinic throughout my second and third years at Wayne Law. My involvement helped me to develop more confidence and experience outside of the scholastic environment of the classroom. Being able to apply legal concepts to real cases definitely helped me as I entered the legal field. Additionally, I got to know many of the students whom I would otherwise not have met in the classroom.

How do you stay involved with Wayne State University Law School?
I have tried to stay involved by attending various events and have often dropped into FLAC to meet with the attorneys there who I learned a lot from and still consult with if I have questions on my own cases. However, these first couple of years of building my practice doesn’t allow for much time outside the office.

What advice do you give someone considering law school?
Just be sure that you know what it is like to really practice law because I think many people may have a false sense of what it means to be an attorney. I love what I do and I have made my legal career what I envisioned it would be, but it might not be for everyone.

Now a bit about your new endeavor at Alvin’s, located quite closely to the Law School on the heart of WSU’s campus. What made you decide to take on this new endeavor?
Throughout school Eugen Barbu and I would discuss going into business together and eventually open up a bar if the right opportunity came along. We looked into a couple of places but when Alvin’s hit the market I jumped right on it. I used to frequent Alvin’s for concerts and shows of local musicians. I worked throughout undergraduate and law school as a bartender and bar manager at a similar club in Ann Arbor, so I knew the business and wanted to continue to be a part of it, only this time as an owner.

Were you definitely interested in an investment in the heart of Detroit?
Yes, I was looking at a few areas in Detroit and this location turned out to be the best in my eyes and certainly in line with my personal interest of the live music scene. I enjoyed going to school in Detroit, I work in Detroit on a regular basis, and I see Detroit as a city that is on the rise and I, along with my partners, want to be a part of that revitalization.

How do you hope to accomplish?
We are looking to renovate Alvin’s into what it was on campus. In the past, students and Detroiter’s alike could go to Alvin’s for a bite to eat during the day, or for a great live show at night with a diverse crowd and diverse selection of music. Our goal is to bring Alvin’s back to the forefront of Detroit music and entertainment.

During our renovation stage we will be open in the evenings, Wednesday through Saturday with the occasional early show and happy hour. Eventually we will be open for lunch and have shows at night seven days a week.

Any upcoming events?
We are in the process of putting together a great calendar of events that will include a wide variety of music, and we will be welcoming students, alumni and staff for Thursdays which will be more of our “Wayne Night” with cover and drink specials for all Wayne affiliates.

* Alvin’s is located at 5756 Cass Ave. in Detroit.

The regional tournament, which tested the participants’ skills in both oral advocacy and legal writing, focused on issues in the War on Terror. The problem posed legal questions involving coercive interrogations, extraordinary rendition and military commissions. The tournament was newly enlarged this year with 24 law schools competing.

After four preliminary rounds the Wayne Law team was seeded first, ahead of the University of Michigan, the University of Minnesota, the University of Iowa, Northwestern, Case Western Reserve and all others. Wayne Law defeated the University of Notre Dame Law School in the quarter-final round before falling 2-1 to Washington University in the semi-finals.

Overall, the Wayne Law team finished in second place for its brief and 3L Oday Salim was the third-place speaker overall (out of 96 participants).

“This was an outstanding performance by a group of very hard-working students,” said Gregory Fox, Wayne Law professor and faculty advisor to the Moot Court team. “Wayne Law is acknowledged as a powerhouse in this competition and this year we certainly maintained that position.”

In addition to Salim, team members included Caren Bales, Grant Munson, Tricia Roelofs and Suzanne Swanson.

Edward M. Wise

This annual symposium is named in memory of Edward M. Wise, a renowned scholar and professor of criminal law, comparative law, international criminal law, and legal history, who taught at Wayne State University Law School from 1965 until his untimely death in 2000.

In an article for Wayne State University’s Fall 2007 edition of The Wayne Lawyer, professors Sandra VanBurkleo and Alan Schenk characterize Wise as a Renaissance Man, a “crack legal research scholar” who was a master of eight languages and an elegant writer. But more importantly, state VanBurkleo and Schenk, Professor Wise “believed that erudition in democratic societies had to be useful, that it had to advance progress and human liberation.”
