MISSION STATEMENT

Founded in 1997, The Journal of Law in Society is a student-managed publication of Wayne State University Law School that provides scholarly discourse on the intersection of law and society. Each year, the journal identifies a range of issues affecting Detroit and other parts of the world and then publishes articles from authors both inside and outside the legal community that address those issues within their social context. By way of research and scholarship, the journal aims to connect Detroit to broader national and international discourse, as well as serve as an educational and practical tool for its audience.

IDENTIFICATION STATEMENT

The Journal of Law in Society (ISSN 1538-5876) is published twice annually by students of Wayne State University Law School. The subscription rate for one volume (two issues) is $25.00 per year. The rate for a single issue is $15.00. Subscriptions are on a prepaid basis; no subscriber will receive the journal until her account is paid. The journal will not issue refunds.

Copies of back issues can be contained by contacting the journal at thejournal@wayne.edu or by writing us at The Journal of Law in Society, Wayne State University Law School, 471 West Palmer Street, Detroit, Michigan 48202.

http://www.law.wayne.edu/journal-of-law-society/

Printed by The Sheridan Group, 450 Fame Avenue, Hanover, Pennsylvania 17331.

Cite as: 18 J.L.Soc’y _____.

Wayne State University is an equal opportunity institution and is committed to a policy of nondiscrimination in all of its operations, employment opportunities, educational programs, and in the treatment of University personnel and students.

© Copyright 2018 by Wayne State University.